Program Disclaimer

In accordance with privacy and human rights legislation, Child Development Institute (CDI) is committed to the security and protection of the personal information of its clients, employees, volunteers, donors and other stakeholders. We value your trust and affirm our commitment to engage in transparency about and accountability for the personal information with which we are entrusted.

Our EarlyON program locations have been closed due to the COVID-19 Pandemic.

As it is important to stay connected, we are providing virtual programs to ensure ongoing community engagement and social inclusion. CDI staff will promote and offer a variety of programs through various social media and networking platforms such as Facebook, Instagram, and Zoom. Some programming will be through public online forums.

While CDI provides online programs using various social media platforms and public forums, we have no control over what you share or post. It is important that you maintain the privacy of the participants by not sharing personal information about them through your social media channels, or posting photos that are easily identifiable.

By participating in our online forums and programs, you agree that Child Development Institute will not be held liable for any personal information you choose to share or post online using media platforms or other methods of communication.

Please note:

If at any time invited or uninvited participants are inappropriate in one of our live sessions we will promptly end the session. Inappropriate invited participants will not be granted access to future sessions.
